Holy Assumption Orthodox Church, Kenai
The only two story structure in the community, the chapel is exemplary of Russian-style architecture.

St. Nicholas Orthodox Church, Juneau
This unique octagon plan of St. Nicholas is known to be the last of the Russian Orthodox churches of this shape. Architecturally, the building is a beautiful example of the Russian American architecture at both the exterior and interior.

Wireless Transmitter Site, Government Hill
The current site includes three separate buildings: the primary and most historic is the actual wireless transmitter building and is distinguished by a small cupola on the roof.

Eagle Historic District
Eagle was established in 1897, by a group of disgruntled gold prospectors who were unable to locate lucrative gold claims in the Klondike. After a group of business people joined them, they decided to start their own city on the other side of the International border. Finding a desirable location twelve river miles beyond the Canadian border, they called it Eagle for the large birds nesting on the bluff. (Courtesy of www.eagleak.org)

Saint George Island Community Hall
The uses of the building evolved much over the years, among them a theatre stage and barber shop. Since 1998, it has housed Tribal Eco-Offices.

4th Avenue Theatre, Anchorage
Located in the heart of downtown, this theater was built in 1947 and is one of the best examples of Art Deco style in America.

Colony Project Warehouse, Palmer
Formerly used as a warehouse, the vacant one and one half stories high building stands on an unkempt lot within the City of Palmer.

Victor Holm Homestead, Kasilof
The Victor Holm property is located in the Kenai Peninsula in Cohoe (Kasilof). The site is located on the west bank of the River.

On the eastern end of Attu Island in the Aleutian Islands, this property consists of the only WWII battlefield on American soil.

St. Nicholas Orthodox Church, Juneau
This unique octagon plan of St. Nicholas is known to be the last of the Russian Orthodox churches of this shape. Architecturally, the building is a beautiful example of the Russian American architecture at both the exterior and interior.
