The Qiyhi Qelahi (Groundhog Mountain) Cultural Landscape is a place of traditional use for the people of Nondalton.

The site is endangered due to the Pebble Limited Partnership’s (PLP) proposed mine that is directly in the middle of the area. If built, the mine will destroy the cultural landscape. As it is, PLP’s current exploratory drilling program is already impacting the cultural landscape because Nondalton residents are avoiding this area their ancestors have used for countless generations.

The Nondalton Tribal Council is working towards documenting the cultural landscape and is participating in the ongoing Section 106 process for the Pebble Project.
